REPUBLICANS NAME STINSON FOR GOVERNOR

As he finished his speech the delegates stood up and cheered.

In response to reports that he had been in communication with William R. Hearst since he came to Saratoga, and that he and Mr. Hearst had formed an alliance for the coming campaign, Colonel Roosevelt issued this statement:

"I have not communicated with Mr. Hearst nor any one else outside the convention, and the candidates we have considered here to-day have been discussed purely upon their own merits and without reference to Mr. Hearst or any one else."

An analysis of the vote for Governor gives Stinson 64, Hearst 28, McEwan, of Albany, 28; State Treasurer Dunn, 28; scattering and not voting, 23. Total, 1015.

Edward Schoenbeck, Mayor of Syracuse, was born in that city on August 6, 1875. He is a graduate of Syracuse University College of Law, and is a member of the law firm of Bond & Schoenbeck, in his home city. He is a member of the Onondaga county Assembly from Onondaga from 1904 to 1907.

The Seventh Ward. He was a Maynard supporter.

What was shown in the Seventh Ward is probably the homestead. Young faction had in store for the other wards questioned in the allegations filed. It is declared by his supporters and friends that when they have concluded their rebuttal testimony, there will not be twenty-five votes that cannot be clearly and clearly counted for. They claim that they are being hourly flooded with protests from voters, charged by the contestant and Citizens' Committee with being fraudulent, who stand ready to fight the charge before the committee.

BANK SHIFTS TO NEW QUARTERS

The mailing department of the consolidated institution. The Planters' National Bank offered the use of its basement, but the office of the Virginia Trust Company, others were willing to do all in their power, but had no spare working-room. The offer of the National Bank of Virginia of its old banking house at the corner of Eleventh and Main, but a few doors away, seemed the most practicable, and it was accepted at once. Workmen were rushed in to clean it up, install additional fixtures and furniture, the lights were cut on, and at 12:30 A. M. the new banking house was ready.

Special messengers were put to work, and all clerks were notified to report for work at 6:30 A. M. yesterday. With the consent and supervision of the engineers in charge, books and papers were moved from the old building, and when the clock struck 6 an hour before opening time, every one was at work in the new bank, the mailing force assisting the morning's accumulation of mail and proceeding in as regular and orderly a manner as though it had known no other working hours.

Public Service Companies Aid.
Manager Tanner, of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, was notified of the situation, and well did the redeem his promise to have proper telephone connections. Linemen were aroused by messengers, hurried down in motor cars, and before the opening hour the bank telephones were ready for business with the army of clerks. The Virginia Railway and Power Company was as prompt with lighting service. The wiring was already in, and desk lamps were installed almost as if by magic.

When 9 o'clock struck yesterday morning and all the business world of Richmond thronged downtown, stopping to gaze at the debris in the street and the jagged hole in the side of the bank wall, the sign painter had done well his work, and the world was notified that the institution was doing business as it had done for many a generation. Busy men, hurrying to the new quarters, found the teaers in their capes ready to pay or receive payment. Discount clerks were there to provide accommodation to patrons, and Colonel John B. Purcell sat back in the president's office as placid and calm as though he had not been on the scene all night, and as though he had not transferred one of the largest financial institutions in the South from old to new quarters between the setting and the rising of the sun.

Will Go Back to Old Home.
Colonel Purcell said yesterday that he had notified John M. Miller, Jr., vice-president and cashier, who is now in the far West, attending a meeting of the American Bankers' Association, and said he expected Mr. Miller would return within the next few days. Colonel Purcell also said that it was his present plan to go back to the old structure as soon as it is repaired. Contractor John T. Wilson has already begun most vigorously that task, eager to redeem the reputation of his firm, from the first serious setback it has received in its large building operations in Richmond, and accident due, it is claimed, to the work of a subcontractor, who was engaged in what all parties admit was a most difficult and dangerous undertaking; for the stone foundations of the bank went but a little way below ground, and in excavating for the foundations for a new skyscraper to occupy the adjoining lot, it became necessary to go far below the bank walls, and to insert underpinning. John T. Wilson, head of the contracting firm, himself took charge shortly after the wall fell and directed an army of workmen in shorting up the remainder and making safe the overhanging cornice where an enormous mass of stone seemed to be tottering and ready to fall to the street below in the slightest jar.

Street Closed to Traffic.
Police Captain Barfoot ordered Main Street closed to vehicle traffic between Eleventh and Twelfth Streets, and street cars were allowed to pass only one at a time, and at a slow pace. Throughout the night and day thousands of spectators watched the workmen building their scaffolding right under the overhanging mass, apparently oblivious of any personal danger.

Engineer Ver Veer, of the John T. Wilson Company; T. J. Smith, of the excavating firm; Building Inspector Beck, and a number of engineers and contractors spent much of yesterday on the scene, carefully examining the damage. No report has as yet been made by the engineers in charge as to where the blame should lie, though all agree that the fall was due directly or indirectly to the excavating.

Hoan Building in Danger.
Acting on the recommendation of Deputy Inspector Beck, who has been investigating the structure for two days, Building Inspector Beck yesterday morning sent a formal warning to the Hoan Building Company, that the southern half of their big building was unsafe and the plant should at once be vacated. Like the First National Bank the Hoan building is affected by the excavation being made for the new building of the Virginia Building Corporation. The Hoan structure is divided from the big hole by only a five-foot alley. Mr. Beck said that the danger was immediate, and that the Hoan building would render is still more unsafe.

"The foundation of the Hoan building," said Mr. Beck, "is only two and one-half feet in the ground, and the bottom of the excavation is now about sixteen feet below it. Tuesday, a number of this were started in the excavation, and this increases the danger. These facts, coupled with the height of the building, the heavy vibrating presses on the lower floors and the heavy storage of paper on the upper floors, made it necessary for me to notify the manager of the Hoan establishment of the danger he was taking in using a part of the building."

Danger From Protracted Rain.
In the event of protracted rains, danger to the structure will be greatly increased. In fact, the southern portion will be dangerous and unfit for occupancy until the foundations of the new building are brought to the ground level."

The precarious position of the Hoan building was not brought to the attention of the Building Inspector by the accident Tuesday night to the First National Bank. As a matter of fact both the Hoan building and the First National Bank are in danger of being destroyed by the excavation in reference to both buildings for several days. Mr. Beck has placed Deputy Phillips in charge of the work. Conditions in such a case are about 1,500 men, including delegates, alternates and interested spectators. They brought thick blankets and the cafes and hotels lobbies began to look livelier the minute they set foot in town.

The day was rife with rumors which shifted from hour to hour, and what

Norman E. Mack, of Buffalo, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, had said:

"Mr. Murphy has told you that he is waiting to learn what the delegates wish. He controls the situation." Therefore, it was with more than the curiosity for a spectacle that the five Tammany special trains were awaited late this afternoon. In all, the Tammany representation in such amounts to about 1,500 men, including delegates, alternates and interested spectators. They brought thick blankets and the cafes and hotels lobbies began to look livelier the minute they set foot in town.

The day was rife with rumors which shifted from hour to hour, and what seemed a strong candidacy one moment had shrunk to a plausible possibility in the next. None of the "possibilities" has relaxed his efforts to corral delegates and the supporters of Representative William Sulzer, Representative James S. Hays and Thos. M. Osborne, former Mayor of Auburn, are working hard.

Mr. Osborne said that a careful canvass had convinced him that he was the strongest candidate from up the State, and that he would go before the convention.

Daniel Cohalan, Norman E. Mack and Charles F. Murphy ate luncheon together in Mr. Murphy's rooms. Mr. Murphy was not accessible to-day. He sent out Mr. Cohalan to talk for him.

"Will the candidate be from up the State or from the greater city?" Mr. Cohalan was asked.

"I think he will," answered Cohalan quickly.

"You ask me who will be the candidate," he continued. "That's a question of the old distinction between can and may."

"Has Mr. Murphy made up his mind?"

"Mr. Murphy has an absolutely open mind."

John B. Stanchfield, former Judge Alton B. Parker, who will be temporary chairman of the convention, and James C. Sheehan were among other important arrivals to-day.

Jessie Morrison Leaves Prison.

Leavenworth, Kan., September 28.—Jessie Lee Morrison, who was paroled from the State Penitentiary yesterday by Governor Stubbs, after having served eight years of a twenty-five-year sentence for killing Mrs. Olin Castle, her rival in love, at Eldorado, Kan., ten years ago, left the prison for Excelsior Springs, Mo., to-day, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Ida M. Hawley, of Excelsior Springs, with whom she will make her home for a time.

Further examination Senator Holstman said that he supposed the money was paid for his vote for Lorimer.

Obituary

Mrs. Sarah I. Kirscheidt.

A telegram from Richmond yesterday morning contained the news of the death at 1 A. M. of Mrs. Sarah I. Kirscheidt, at her home in New Orleans.

Mrs. Kirscheidt was a daughter of the late Jacob A. Levy, and was born in this city. She was a strikingly handsome woman, and during the war she made less weary many a wounded Confederate soldier who lay suffering in the hospitals. Shortly after the cessation of hostilities she married Major Edwin I. Kirscheidt, adjutant of New Orleans' crack military command, the Washington Artillery, an office which he held not only during the war, but for nearly forty years after. He died several years since.

Mrs. Kirscheidt was a sister of Miss Rachel and Dr. H. H. Levy, of this city, and of Mrs. Alexander Hart, of Norfolk.

Funeral of Professor Tilow.

The funeral of Professor C. W. Tilow was conducted from his residence, 215 East Marshall Street, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, interment being in Hollywood. In late years Tilow's Orchestra, as it was known, was not conducted by Professor Tilow, but by his son, G. A. Tilow.

Professor Tilow is survived by his wife, three sons and three daughters, viz: Mrs. O. F. Holland, J. Otto Tilow and P. B. Tilow, who reside in Philadelphia, and G. A. Tilow, Mrs. Wm. Relling and Mrs. A. Luebner, who reside in Richmond.

Funeral of Auditor Dixon.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Raleigh, N. C., September 28.—The funeral ceremonies of Major B. F. Dixon, late State Auditor, began at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon with the removal of the body from the rotunda of the Capitol to Edenton Street Methodist Church, where services were conducted by Dr. H. A. North, the pastor, and Dr. J. E. Cole. High tributes were paid by Governor Kitchin and Ex-Governor Aycock; Major Dixon having served as Auditor during the administrations of both. From the church the remains were conveyed to Oakwood Cemetery.

Active pall-bearers were Masons from William G. Hill Lodge, with a long procession of Masons representing all three Raleigh lodges; also Knights of Pythias and Junior Order of United American Mechanics. Honorary pall-bearers were State officers, including judges of the Supreme Court, and numbers of the most prominent citizens.

In the procession was a long line of Confederate veterans and Spanish-American War veterans.

Great throngs of people viewed the remains as they lay in state in the rotunda of the State House, prior to the funeral. The setting for the catafalque was especially beautiful. There were stately palms and ferns tastefully placed about the rotunda. Black and white mourning draperies added to the striking effect. The casket was draped in national and State flags, along with the old flag of his Confederate regiment, the Fourteenth North Carolina. Surmounting these was the sword he carried in the Civil War and later in the Spanish-American War, for which he was commissioned major.
